What the brain expects the data to look like